clining mortality rate has had a stabilizing influence upon family life by decreasing the chances of the family circle being broken up by the loss of a parent while children are young, says insurance In families where there are young children the chances are currently less than 1 in 100 that one of the parents will die within a year, it is reported.

For example: in a family where the husband is 20 years old and the wife 19, and there is one child, an infant, the chances are only 9 per 1,000 that the husband will die within five years, and only 10 per 1,000 that either the wife or he child, or both, will die within hat period. The probabilities of death within five years are greater for larger families and also where parents are older. Thus, the chances of death within five years increase to 5 per 1,000 for the father who i 35 years of age and to 17 per 1,000 for at least one member of a family which includes a wife and three children. Each year more than 700,000 families are broken up by the
